Sir:

The Information Disclosure Statement filed October 9, 2001, cited "PKZIP . . ."
The citation was based upon a search report relating to PCT/SG1999/000018.
Applicants also had cited "Microsoft Office 97 . . ." based upon a search report relating to PCT/SG1999/000077. Applicants have contacted the International Search Authority
(ISA) to obtain copies of the PKZIP and Microsoft Office documents cited by the ISA.
The ISA responded stating the references are computer programs, and not actual documents. The ISA did, however, enclose a copy of a "Wikipedia" extract relating to the zip format. The extract is being submitted to complete the record. A copy of the correspondence from the ISA is also attached.

Dear Sir or Madam,

In reply to your fax of October 25, 2005 we would like to give you the following information:

We confirm that the citations of

- 1) "PKZIP..." in the Search Report relating to PCT/SG1999/000018 and of
- 2) "Microsoft Office 97..." in the Search Report relating to PCT/SG1999/000077

refer only to computer programs, not to documents.

Both programs have been cited as such in the international search reports as both programs are considered to be obviously known by every person skilled in the art of computer programming.

More information about the PKZIP program can be found on the Internet, http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/ZIP_file_format. In the following a brief extract of this page:

ZIP (file format)

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia.

(Redirected from ZIP file format)

The ZIP file format is a popular data compression and archival format. A ZIP file contains one or more files that have been compressed or stored.

The format was originally designed by Phil Katz for PKZIP. However, many software utilities other than PKZIP itself are now available to create, modify or open ZIP files, notably WinZip, BOMArchiveHelper, PicoZip, Info-ZIP, WinRAR and 7-Zip. Microsoft has also included minimal ZIP support (under the name "compressed folders") in later versions of its Windows operating system. ZIP files generally use the file extensions ".zip" or ".ZIP" and the MIME media type application/zip. Some software uses the ZIP file format as a wrapper for a large number of small items. Generally, when this is done a different file extension is used. Examples of this usage are Java Jar files, id Software .pk3/.pk4 files, package files for Stemania and Whamp, and some OpenOffice.org document formats. The OpenDocument format is usually sent as a Jar file, so it can be easily uncompressed and compressed using tools for ZIP files.

History

[edit]

Early history

The ZIP file format was originally created by Phil Katz, founder of PKWARE. Katz publicly released technical documentation on the ZIP file format, along with the first version of his PKZIP archiver, in January 1989.
